

ONE BY ONE, SIX DIE IN LAKE GALE

Erie Barge Torn from Its Mooring, Sailors Cling to the Rigging

Cleveland, Oct. 21.—Six lives are known to have been lost and it is feared many more were snuffed out in a gale that swept Lake Erie last night. The barge D. L. Filer, owned by the Hines Lumber Company, of Chicago, ran into the storm off Bar Point early in the evening. For more than two hours the vessel battled with the huge seas and finally reached Bar Point in a leaking condition. There, however, the storm tore the barge from her moorings and drove her six miles into the open lake. When the vessel began to break up the captain and crew of six men took to the rigging. One by one five of the men became exhausted and fell into the lake.

When the steamer Western States, of the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation Company, approached the barge this morning only Captain Mathison and one sailor were left. A few minutes later the sailor was swept to his death. The captain was saved just as the barge sank. The tug Shaun Rhue, of Detroit, was badly disabled in the storm, but was taken safely to Pelee Island, Ont., this morning, manned only by its aged captain and two of his crew. Another tug went to the rescue of the Shaun Rhue, but the captain refused to leave the vessel. It is not known whether the rest of the crew were saved.

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 21.—The American schooner Fannie C. Bowen, of Fall River, foundered last night when she ran into a terrific storm about 1,200 miles east of Cape Henry. Her captain and first mate went down with the vessel. Seven of the crew were brought here this morning by the Norwegian steamer Avon.

WILSON 'NEW LINCOLN,' MORGENTHAU ASSERTS

President Lauded, Hughes Criticized at Cooper Union Meeting

Henry Morgenthau, speaking at Cooper Union last night, described President Wilson as "the new Lincoln," and said he was preparing not for war but to prevent war.

Justice Hughes' initials, said Senator Charles E. Thomas, of Colorado, might stand for "Chronic Evader." The Republican candidate had proved himself "a political if not a moral and intellectual coward," he said, by his refusal to discuss intelligently and definitely the big questions of the day.

It was a Democratic meeting and wellattended.

Denied $1 a Week for Tobacco Husband Runs Away from Home

"He Might Spend Some of It on Beer and Frivolity," Wife
Objects—Man's Plea Prevails and Separation Suit Is Dismissed.

From the moment she entered the domestic relations court in Mount Vernon yesterday, following the policemen who had her husband in charge, little Mrs. Henry Erb had the sympathy of all present.

Briefly and in a voice so low as almost to be inaudible the wife told her story. It was just another abandonment case. Erb, making $50 a month on the Harlem Railroad, had suddenly decided to quit, leaving his wife to make the best of it alone. Reluctant even in her desperation to take such a step, she had appealed to the police. And there, to testify to official efficiency, stood Erb in court, his heavy brows knit in a straight line.

"If I suspend sentence will you return to your wife and try to do the right thing?" asked Judge Appell.

"What would the sentence be?" speculated Erb. "Well, it doesn't make much difference at that. If you can't make her promise to give me a dollar a week, like I always begged her to, I'd just as soon spend the rest of my life in jail."

"There you are, judge!" cried Mrs.

Erb. "That shows you the man. Ever since we've been married he's pestered me for a dollar a week to spend on chewing tobacco."

"Does he spend it all that way?" the court wanted to know.

"I haven't any doubt he would if he got it."

The stern light had gone out of the judicial eyes. Erb looked into them and saw a brother man.

"Please, judge," he pleaded, pressing the advantage, "can't I have a dollar a week for chewing and little things I need?"

Mrs. Erb, who had miraculously seemed to grow into a commanding figure, objected that part of the weekly dollar might be spent on beer. But Judge Appell was already engaged in dismissing the abandonment charge and entering an order directing that Erb get his allowance.

"For Me There Is But One Phonograph...."

HE truth of the matter is—I never was able to interest myself in a phonograph until I heard the Aeolian-Vocalion. Not that I discount the certain qualities of many of the instruments which are today so well known.

"No I recognize that for a long time the phonograph has been a worthy instrument. That listening to a phonograph always has given me a suggestion of its future possibilities rather than immediate musical satisfaction demonstrates nothing. I am likely to be over critical.

"The day I first heard the Vocalion I was no more than ever interested in phonographs. It was just an idle curiosity that sent me in to see the new phonograph—a curiosity that had almost waned before I passed the threshold of the store. So it was in the spirit of 'seeing the thing through' in courtesy to the salesman who waited upon me that I consented to hear a record or two played.

"I shall never forget my Vocalion premier. As the young man adjusted the record and started the motor—merely with a quick movement of the tone-arm, a clever convenience I noted—I sat unexpectant, waiting for the usual.

"Then suddenly the great, rich tones of a wonderfully played 'cello were sounding. It was almost impossible to believe that a phonograph was bringing such tone from a record. I reasoned against the evidence of my ears. But gradually I lost all sense of listening to a phonograph—it was Pablo Casals himself, who played to me Handel's Largo as I never before had heard it.

"I came to hear a single record. I remained to luxuriate in the new-found beauties of many familiar and near-familiar ones.

"And, finally, the Graduola expression device was explained. A bit stage frightened I was as I attempted to operate it. But the self-consciousness quickly passed and I found myself enjoying hugely a new experience. This fine voice that rang through the room was mine. I pressed the Graduola together—the tone grew in volume until my throat tensed in sympathetic effort. I drew the Graduola apart—the tone whispered in exquisite pianissimo as I breathed softly lest I disturb these sweet, delicate sounds

"I might have known that a great musical instrument maker would produce a new and different phonograph. For a musical instrument is not a thing of science alone—it must be made by a man who knows and a man who feels.

"For me there is but one phonograph—the Vocalion. For you?—when you have heard you will decide."
